

ACSS Additional information - skills

The FSA's Advisory Committee for Social Science (ACSS) is an independent expert committee that helps the FSA use the social sciences to shape, deliver and evaluate its policies for safe, healthy and sustainable food. We are recruiting new members to complement the skills and knowledge currently in the committee and welcome applications from across the social science disciplines, including behavioural science. We particularly welcome applicants with expertise in economics, evaluation and appraisal techniques, and/or statistical analysis, and in business/organisational behaviours.
